

Women's Rights in China and Government Implementation of 2014 UPR Recommendations

March 8, 2018

A Joint NGO Report by:

Women's Rights Monitor (WRM)*

WRM is an independent civil society group, set up in 2015 after its predecessor was forced to closed down by the government in China. The group focuses on raising awareness about women's status in society through public education and training.

The Anti-Discrimination Legal Aid Group (ADLA)*

ADLA is an independent civil society group, founded in 2012. The group engages in advocacy and training on rights of women, of people affected by certain stigmatized health conditions, and of persons with disability.

*(For the safety of members of the above two groups, their actual names and information revealing their identities have been withheld, as they have come under increasing pressure, harassment and threats by the government in recent years.)

The Network of Chinese Human Rights Defenders CHRD

CHRD, founded in 2005, is a coalition of Chinese and international human rights non-governmental organizations. The network is dedicated to the promotion of human rights through peaceful efforts to push for democratic and rule of law reforms and to strengthen grassroots activism in China. CHRD engages in capacity building and provides advocacy tools as well as technical support to grassroots Chinese human rights defenders through organizing trainings on international human rights instruments and protections for human rights defenders.

CHRD administers a program of small grants for activists to implement human rights projects, and provides legal aid and emergency assistance to victims of human rights abuses.

CHRD investigates and monitors the human rights situation in China, disseminating human rights news updates, alerts to urgent situations, statements about important developments, and research reports and analyses to inform the media, policy makers, human rights agencies, and the general public.
